Italy Decrees Emergency Measures to Fight Terrorism

ROME, March 21.—The Italian government, taking note of a situation of emergency," today decreed stiff anti-terrorism measures, including a mandatory maximum penalty of life imprisorment for kidneppers who kill

The measures, which also in-trease police detention, interrogation and wiretapping powers, were ordered as the search bootsteed for former Premier Aldo Moro, kidnapped by the urban guerrilla Red Brigades last

In these moments we have to make all the sacrifices necessary to overcome this situation of emergency," Justice Minister Paolo Bonifacio said after a Cabinet session. He said that the decrees were needed "because we are living in difficult times" and because law officers needed extra powers to combat violence.

The Cabinet rejected demands for introduction of the death penalty, berned since the end of World War II, and for the maximum penalty for kidnappers to life imprisonment if the victim is killed and to 30 years if the victim remains alive. Current penalties for convicted kidnappers range from 20 years to life in prison, depending on cir-cumstances and the discretion of against Palestinian guerrillas a week ago. If the UN observer force is positioned first in the area around the Litani, it would tend to confirm reports that one of Israel's demands is that the withdrawal be a phased affair, beginning not at Israel's northern border but at the limit of Israel's advance into Lebanon.

The move into Lebanon began last Tuesday after a Palestinian attack on Israeli civilians in which 44 persons were killed including pine of the attackers, and more than 70 people were

The withdrawal resolution was passed by the UN Security Council on Sunday and calls for a peacekeeping force of about 4,000. Some reports said that it would take at least a month for the entire UN force to be put into place, assuming that there were minimal mags in negotiating Israel's return to its accepted northern boundary.

Israeli Displeasure

Israeli officials made no secret of their displeasure that the UN resolution, prompted by the United States, was passed quickly while Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan were flying to the United States for talks with President Carter. The talks began in Washington today.

The Israelis' reaction to the resolution has been tepid at best. does not reject it, but they have not welcomed it, either. The coolness stems in part from a long-standing distrust of UN peacekeeping missions—based on bad experiences.

Officials here today were speculating on what guarantees Israel wanted in exchange for replacing its military forces in Lebanon with a UN peacekeeping contin-

Mr. Weizman, Mr. Begin, Gen. Gur and others have stipulated that the chief consideration is that the Palestinian guerrillas not be given an opportunity to regroup near Israel's northern border, an area they have used in the past to make attacks on

Other considerations said to be of concern to the Israelis are:

• Firm arrangements to assure that the PLO not be based south of the Litani River.

· A requirement that the Mediterranean city of Tyre, which Gen. Gur said yesterday Israel capture at any time, be turned into a supervised civilian port. It has been, the Israelis claim, a major supply channel for the guerrillas.

official testified yesterday that he made cash deliveries as part of a $1-million lobbying effort approved by South Korea's President Park Chung Hee. The ex-official, Kim Sang Keum, who defected to the United States six months ago, told a U.S. District Court jury that he delivered bundles of $100 bills from the Korean Central Intelligence Agency to Hancho Kim, a Korean-born businessman here.

Hancho Kim, who is not relat ed to the witness, is being tried on charges of conspiring to bribe congressmen with $600,000 in cash that Kim Sang Keum allegedly furnished him. But government projecutors have said there is no evidence that Hancho Kim actually paid any bribes.

As described by Kim Sang Keum. Hancho Kim's lobbying effort was separate from that of Tongsun Park another Washington-based businessman. However. the witners said part of the funds that he delivered came from checks signed by Tongsun Park that Korean intelligence of-

Bishop Muzorewa, considered the most popular black leader in the country, said that swearing allegiance to Rhodesia had been an "uneasy" but necessary step.

"It is something that we have to do to reach the goal," he said, referring to majority rule. There are times when you have to swallow your pride to advance the highest good, and this is one Mr. Sithole brushed sside questions about the proprieties of the ceremony, saying: "It is a miracle that it has taken place at all." The swearing-in inserted the black leaders into a government structure that keeps ultimate constitutional power in white hands. For example, Mr. Smith will retain the title of Prime Minister and the statutory powers that accompany it. However, Mr. Smith said after today's meetings that executive authority would be equally shared. He answered several questions with pointed reminders that the four leaders, not he alone, were now in power.

Another problem for the black leaders will be control of the white-led military and security forces. Previously, the forces have been directed by a 10-member War Council, headed by Mr. Smith, but sources disclosed today that a smaller body was established recently under the same name; it is chaired by Lt. # Homosexual Lawyer Wins Florida Case

By Jon Nordheimer

MIAMI, March 21 (NYT).-The Plorida Supreme Court ruled yesterday that a homosexual cannot be denied admission to the state bar because of sexual preference.

In a 60-1 ruling, the court declared that acknowledgment of a homosexual preference by an applicant was not in itself a failure to meet the standard of "good moral character."

The decision was believed to be the first in the United States concerning a homosexual's right to practice law. The matter has not been the subject of controversy in legal circles, because state bars apparently have not systematically excluded homo-

Sources at American Bar Association headquarters in Chicago said that applicants were not routinely questioned about sexual orientation by bar examiners in individual states. If the subject was raised under any pretext, they said, applicants have apparently been able to evade the issue and gain ad-

Circumstances Not Unusual The Florida case arose out of circumstances that were not considered highly unusual 1976, Robert Eimers, then a resident of California, applied for admission to the Florida bar. He had passed the Flor-ids bar exam but was summoned to Piorida for a special hearing before the State Board of Bar Examiners. In that interview, he was asked if he was a homosexual. Mr. Eimers'e response was affirmative.

"The situation was not too unusual," said Terry De Meo, a lawyer for the American Civil rties Union, who is representing Mr. Eimers. "Apparently, someone in California wrote the Board of Examiners as a form of blackmail against Mr. Ei-that its ruling might go against an applicant when evidence established that the applicant engaged in homosexual acts.

"This case stands for a broad anti - discrimination principle that government may not discriminate constitutionally by reason of status alone," said Bruce Winick, general counsel of the Florida Civil Libertles Union. The court decision in favor of Eimers means that a person's status cannot be considered sufficient reason to disquelify any person from government benefits, privilege, license or employment."

Yesterday's ruling, Miss De Meo said, essentially stated that a homosexual should be considered in good moral standing otherwise. By that measure, heterosexuals would face the same test of character before bar examiners, she said.

However, the court specified that any disciplining of bar members because of personal moral standards should take place only when there was 's substantial connection" between private behavior and the ability to carry out professional responshillities

"Otherwise," the court stated, "the bar will he virtually unfettered in its power to censor the private morals of Florida bar members regardless of any nexus between the behavior and the ability to responsibly perform as

U.S. High Court Supports New Kent State Trial

WASHINGTON, March 21 (AP). -Ohio authorities must again face a $46-million damage suit for National Guard shootings of Kent State University students in 1970, the Supreme Court said

By denying the appeals of Gov. James Rhodes and members of the Ohio National Guard, the court cleared the way for a new federal trial in Cleveland. National Guard troops killed four students and wounded nine in a burst of gunfire May 4, 1970, during a campus protest against the invasion of Cambodia by U.S. troops in Vietnam. Relatives of the four slain students and the nine wounded students sued state officials for alleged civil-rights violations.

A 1975 trial cleared Gov. Rhodes and the National Guardsmen of all charges. One of the jurors had been assaulted and threatened during the trial, however, and a U.S. Appeals Court said that the effect of those incidents on the outcome should have been studied. The Appeals Court's order for a new trial was left standing by the Supreme Court.

New Interest in Vast Fields

Southeast Asian Natural Gas Stimulated by U.S. Shortage

By George McArthur

SINGAPORE, March 21.—While the United States has a shortage natural gas, Southeast Asia is sitting on vast undeveloped fields of the resource.

"The solution seems obvious to me," said an official from the state of Western Australia, where a $2-billion liquefled natural gas (LNG) project is planned. The Indonesian national oil company, Fertamina, already has contracted to ship LNG to Califormia beginning in the early 1980s, and it is looking to the United States for a still larger market. So is Petronas, the national oil company of Malaysia. which also has vast reserves of natural gas.

Even Thalland, which now has reserves sufficient only for domestic development, is hoping for new discoveries and is giving the United States a long-range look. The optimistic outlook for LNG projects was one of the few cheerful notes of a just-concluded Southeast Asia conference that drew about 7,000 oilmen and ex-

The decisions are complicated by Mr. Carter's desire to increase U.S. domestic production and keep LNG prices separate from crude oil prices set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The LNG deal with Indonesia is now being held up because the United States refuses to accept a "price escalation clause" that would tie LNG prices io some measure to OPEC crude

U.S. Program to Track Down Delinquent Fathers Pays Off

"This program is a success," said Secretary of Health, Mineation

WASHINGTON, March 21 (WP). - The new federal-state 'runaway fathers" program has helped states collect $1.6 billion over the last two years by tracing absent fathers and making them support their children at a cost of $457 million to the federal, state and local governments.

While some fathers are too poor to pay, the program's deputy director, Louis Hays, said that tracers had discovered plenty of well-to-do fathers. In Sacramento, officials in one, nonsupport action discovered that the fatner was a retired military officer who was collecting both a pension and a salary from a second job, with a total income of $60,000 a year. In Michigan, a law student who had divorced his wife years earlier and fallen $5,000 behind on $20-a-month child-support pay-merts, was tracked down when his family went on welfare. He had advanced considerably in his profession-he was now a judge. Also in Michigan, a man who had been ordered to pay $100 a month in child support was $13,-000 in arrears. His family went on welfare. He was later found to be an official of an aircraft manufacturing company in California. When he learned that officials were after him, he hired an attorney and sent $10,000 as a down payment on his arrears. "He's now caught up and current in his payments," said Mr. Hays.

Half Can Pay Mr. Hays said that, while statistics are not complete, at least half of the fathers tracked down "have the capacity to pay some reason-able level of child support and some have rather substantial incomes. State officials say some doctors and lawyers making up to $100,000 a year have been evading child support. Not a high percentage, but a few hundred."

Some states are reaping blg dividends. California collected $141 million last year, Pennsylvania $156 million Four years ago, when Sen. Rus-sell Long, D-La., pushed through an amendment creating a federal program to track down runaway fathers of welfare children, there was much sniggering and huffing from his critics. One of the nation's leading social experts said: "What's the point? Most of these men have no money to collect any-

Today, no one is sniggering. About 1 million parents who otherwise would pay nothing are now making payments. The program is now bringing in more than $1 billion a year in childsupport payments for welfare mothers or other families from which the father has disappeared or refused to support the children. That is about 10 per cent of the entire national cost of the program of aid to families with dependent children.

New MERIT gives all the flavor you've ever wantedat a very low tar level.

By isolating certain 'key' flavor ingredients of cigarette smoke, ingredients that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar, researchers at Philip Morris have developed a way to pack flavor - incredible flavor - into a cigarette without the usual increase in tar.

It was about the toughest problem in cigarette history -- and it took Philip Morris researchers a full twelve years to solve it. It was done by analysing the flavor ingredients in tobacco and selecting only those elements that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar.

Only after exhaustive tests was the perfect blend achieved. A cigarette called MERIT, with a new enriched flavor process.

And then Philip Morris tested it on a massive scale. Thousands of smokers in the USA were asked to taste-test MERIT against the main competition. Smokers were asked to choose the richest tasting cigarette from a number of well known brands.

The results were sensational and more than justified those twelve hard years in formulating MERIT. A substantial majority of the smokers tested said that MERIT delivered more flavor, in some cases, than cigarettes carrying 50%

Needless to say all the high hopes for MERIT have now been justified by the success of its US launch - in a short space of time MERIT has taken off in the States and achieved in the words of the leading authority the most successful new introduction ever in the US:*

Tyre and Terror

That the Israeli invasion of southern Lebanon stopped short of capturing Tyre makes a rather important point. For Tyre was where that terrorist raid was launched which began the whole Lebanese incursion. with its hundreds of dead and thousands of refugees. Israel crossed the border into its northern neighbor to stamp out Palestinian terrorism-but did not take Tyre.

Actually, of course, Israel did uproot most of the Palestinians from southern Lebanon and does have territory to exchange for guarantees against their return. But the pprooting will not end Palestinian guerrilla and terror activities—it was the uprooting of the Palestinians in the earlier wars that has given drive and goals to their activists today. And who can possibly guarantee Israel against terror arising in southern Lebanon, or northern Lebanon, or Syria, or the West Bank itself?

No state can be guaranteed against terror. In Italy and West Germany it is the product of a violent elite which believes it knows better what the masses need than do the masses. In Northern Ireland it is a more active form of nationalism than the nations concerned desire. And if a Palestinian entity were created it would probably not satisfy all the Palestinians—there would be Provos who would want much more, and blow up marketplaces to prove it.

But if such an entity were brought into being at least some, probably many, of the Palestinians would have a homeland; they would seek to make it flourish and might become more interested in that than in dreams of other boundaries. To Israel, such a prospect is hardly inviting. But is it not better than the present complete uncertainty in which Palestinians live? Israel's neighbors, too, who have perennial difficulties with the refugees, might well aid in working to create an at least relatively stable home

Pushing Palestinians back from the immediate frontier will not solve their problem, or Israel's. Terror can spring up anywhere and be dispatched anywhere. Much of its force depends on the basic justice of the cause for which terror fights, however badly terror may serve that cause. And the Palestinians do have a cause, however poorly it may be represented by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Tyre, therefore, may be regarded as a kind of twisted symbol of an intricate dilemma. It is a challenge to Israel to recognize that its security does not depend wholly on topography; it is a challenge to the Arab states to acknowledge that the Middle East needs a Lecure Israel; it is a challenge to the international community to work for a fundamental stability for all peoples in that

Bhutto's Death Sentence

The death sentence given former Pakistani Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, convicted for ordering a rival's assassination, poses a stark choice between the demands of law and the demands of politics. His trial was public and lengthy and held in conformance with the law of the land; Mr. Bhutto can yet appeal and ask the government for clemency. But even though the principles of accountability and legality are thus being respected, a certain basic political 'law' is not, Mr. Bhutto still claims substantial numbers of followers, and many of them see his sentence, as they saw his arrest and trial, as an expression of vengeance. The disturbances reported on Monday in several Pakistani cities offer a taste of the form their continued alienation could take. The military leadership is not so firmly in command as to tempt that sort of trouble without a second thought.

We hope the government of Gen. Zia does give that second thought. We do so not with the thought that the crime of which Mr. Bhutto was convicted is not serious or that he is innocent or that his trial was fraudulent. What troubles us is that it is asking a great deal of Mr. Bhutto's still substantial constituency to expect them to accept that the process by which justice has been meted out to Mr. Bhutto is untinged by politics. For all of his real and imagined misdeeds and flaws of character and policy, Mr. Bhutto did have political legitimacy: He was the people's choice. The generals do not have that legitimacy, and they are therefore at a great disadvantage in convincing Mr. Bhutto's supporters that what is happening to him now is fair.

In the very different circumstances surrounding President Ford's pardon of President Nixon, essentially political grounds were found for sparing the disgraced president the full rigors of the judicial process. The argument was that the country had seen sufficient upheaval during the period leading up to Mr. Nixon's resignation and that the public interest in tranquillity and a return to normalcy would be better served by pardon than by a series of trials. That is not to say that the pardon was universally approved or that the Pakistanis should or can follow literally that particular U.S. example. It is to say that Americans are in a good position to appreciate the moral and legal and political complexities of the passage the Pakistani government is entering now.

Soviet Arms Buildun

Carter over the weekend mark a striking change in his attitude to Soviet military expansion. "Excessive Soviet buildup . . . Massive forces that could be used for political blackmail and threaten our vital interests . . . seeking to dominate those around them . . . ominous use of Soviet military power, with mercenaries from other Communist countries, to intervene in local conflicts, as in Africa . . . " This is a far cry indeed from the Carter who pledged himself to cut the defense budget, who appointed the "dove" Paul Warnke as his chief arms negotiator, and whose defense policy, although not really "wet," was disconcertingly dampish in several key areas.

Carter and Begin

Tough talking between President Carter and Menachem Begin was expected even before their meeting was postponed as a result of the el-Fatah incursion into Israel. Now, one week later, following Israel's invasion of the south of Lebanon there is a posstbility of an angry confrontation that will not be disguised in any way by the familiar references to the special friendship between the two countries. The scale and ruthlessness of the Israeli operation in Lebanon. going far beyond traditional Israeli retaliation against the Palestinians, may have killed off the peace initiative launched by President Sadat of Egypt which was already foundering-causing growing friction between Washington and Jerusalem in the process -From the Financial Times (London).

France: A New Stage

The spectacular victory of the majority does not mean the recently held elections will be placed in parentheses and that life will continue as before. The great stirring of ideas, of hopes, of worries, the demands and the promises, even the modifying of the political balance that is shown by the ballot box indicates—quite to the contrary that France enters a new stage in its long evolution. What one can say, on the other hand, is that this new stage will be more pleasurable than that which could have been expected had the left won. Even if a social crisis arises from the disillusionment and dejection of those who placed excessive hopes in the Socialist-Communist camps, the French economy will, in any case, hereafter rapidly find its balance, particularly in regards to employment . . .

WASHINGTON—Peter Jay, Her Britannic Majesty's new ambassador to the United States, is something very different in the way of envoys from the United Kingdom. It is not that he is only 40 years old and has no previous diplomatic experience. It is not that he is a journalist rather than a professional politician or foreign-service careerist. It is not even that he is the conin-law of Prime Minister James Callaghan, though this relationship drew jeers of nepotism from opposition benches when the appointment was announced and obviously gives the ambassador ready access to the center of backhome power.

What really makes Jay unique in the line of British ambassadors is his record of sharp disagreement with the basic economic policies of past Labor governments and indeed with the Keynesian leanings of all Western democracies' since the Great Depression, the United States included. As a journalist specializing in economic affairs, Jay ceaselessly warned his country in print and by television that it was risking the kind of inflation that wrecked the German economy and brought Hitler to power. And what Britain was doing, he said, was also being done by other Western European countries and the United States.

In Opposition?

While such opinions would seem to place Jay in opposition to the Labor party and the government that sent him to Washsistency between his views and the government's now that it has faced up to the menace of inflation and is doing something about it.

What Jay thinks of the tentative inflation-control efforts of the Carter administration he sayeth not. A tyro diplomat he may be, but he is not about to find fault with the government to which he is accredited. Yet much of what he has written in the past would curl the hair of George Meany and the Democratic liberals in Congress. Jay will not be reading them any lectures. He speaks only approvingly of the Carter administration when he speaks of it at

Jay contributed an essay to a book titled "The Future That Doesn't Work: Social Democracy's Failure in Britain," published in 1977. He now explains that it was excerpted from a lecture he had previously delivered to the Institute of Economic Affairs. It was an analysis of the economic situation in Britain at the time it was written and not intended to be engraved on stone for the ages. "I stand by it," he says. "But events are catching it up." In a speech at the National Press Club shortly after his arrival in Washington, Jay assured his audience that Britain had changed direction and was now headed out of the inflation woods, not deeper into them. The turning point, he believes, was Cailashan's speech to the Labor party conference in 1976, in which the Prime Minister "threw Keynes

The thesis of Jay's essay is that the unemployment-inflation dilemma creates a sort of politicoeconomic Catch-22 High unemployment is unacceptable to the British electorate, as it is to the voters in other democratic countries. The result is that candidates for elective office tend to outpromise each other in programs designed to restore full employment by fiscal and monetary means. Once in office, they try to redeem their campaign pledges, and worsening inflation is the inevitable consequence. Jay's essay sums it up this way:

"We reach the depressing conclusion that the operation of free democracy appears to force governments into positions (the commitment to full employment) that prevent them from taking steps (fiscal and monetary restraint) that are necessary to arrest the menace (accelerated inflation) that threatens to undermine the condition (stable prosperity) on which political stability and therefore liberal democracy

Meanwhile, .most unions are again accepting a regimen of wage restraints for the next two years. The new formula calls for increased wages on a descending scale-down to 4 per cent in the second year. With the inflation rate now shrunk to a one-digit figure, the pressure for more generous increases is expected to ease. Not all unions accept the new arrangement, as the recent strike of firemen demonstrated. The firemen's union demanded a catch-up 30per-cent boost in pay scale, but the government stood firm and won a 10-per-cent settlement.

CONDON - This summer the Northeast coast of America will be like the Costa Brava" -Freddie Laker, the pioneer of cheap fares across the Atlantic, predicted to me two months ago. Already, the last quarter of last year, when the cheap fares began, showed a 21-per-cent increase in British travelers to the United States over the previous year.

Since then the air battle has intensified, the dollar has fallen, and Europeans have rushed to book tickets for the United States. Last week, the fares reached a new low with British Airways charging only £63 ($122) for a flight to Washington. But this transatlantic boom, welcome though it is, only accentuates the prohibitive cost of European travel and the sad consequences for European unity.
With the low fares and the falling dollar, the Europeans have begun to realize, rather belatedly, that the United States is the ideal tourist country for the inhabitants of a crowded continent in search of lebensraum. The entire coastline of West Germany is shorter (and a great deal colder in summer) than the coastline of many single states, like Massa-chusetts; and the empty beaches of Martha's Vineyard or Santa Barbara have no equivalent in Western Europe. Even the beach at Santa Monica, right next door to Los Angeles, is far less crowded and less developed than the French Riviera.

Cheaper in U.S.

United States that is cheaper: It is staying there, compared to inflationary Europe. For families with children the whole business of casual travel is far simpler and chesper-with the informal motels, the quick restaurants. the cheap gasoline—than moving through hotels in most European countries. And while most U.S. cities may not be the European's idea of cultural tourism, they are all compensated for by New York, which each year becomes more cosmopolitan and more inviting to visitors, as it gradually changes its chief role, from the financial copital to the tourist capital of the world, and West Germans Italians and Japanese compete not only to stay there, but to buy

So far, so good. The tourist migrations across the Atlantic are only sensible at a time when Europe in August is increasingly costly and overcrowded; and this new rush across the Atlantic may much to make Europeans understand the Americans better. But what about Europeans understanding each other? With each new drop in U.S. ak fares, the cost of flying within Europe be-sons, have gone bankrupt. An: the British airlines point to they as examples of what happen when you push competition to far. British Airways are now try ing to respond to the competition from tour operators by producing cheaper flights to tourist resorts providing you book a month in This is no substitute for chear travel at short notice on scheduled flights, which is now available to the United States; and this has come about through the classic means of increasing cmsumption: First overproduction, in the form of jumbo jets, and then the arrival of bold intruders, notsbly Freddie Laker. The Europeans, with their sharp distinction between them packages for tourists and expensive scheduled flights for businessmen, have succeeded in fashioning air travel in the old pattern of elitism, and it has become not a democratizing influence, but a new kind of class division.

Why Different?

The European airlines insist that the scheduled flights must charge what the traffic will bear and that the cheaper fares will not correspondingly increase the number of passengers. But the rush of new transatiantic passen-gers has so far disproved this theory with respect to the United States: Why should Europe be different?

The fact is that the high cost of travel in Europe is the consequence of agreements between nationalized airlines which are very close to cartels. It is just this kind of restriction that the European community was supposed to break up-both through generally encouraging competition and through its specific transport policy. The response to the air travel scandal from the EEC in Brussels has so far been minimal. But here surely is an opportunity. for the Community to take up a cause which would have an immediate appeal to European consumers-just the kind of cause to stimulate interest in direct dections-and to show that European unity is not just a question of new regulations and communic but a policy enabling ordinary as to move through their own continent as easily as through their own country.

'Equus': Freudianism Without the Staging

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

and the Hautefeuille in English) is the screen version of Peter. Shaffer's play, a sort of mail-order course in the theories of psychospalysis. The original enjoyed success in London, New York and peris, but less, one suspects, on the grounds of its literary merits (which are scant) than for John Dester's ingenious staging.

In his play, Shaffer recounted the motives that led to a singularly repulsive crime of cruelty. An adolescent from a small English town is taken into custody for having blinded six horses at a riding academy where he was employed as a stable boy. He is judged unbalanced and is handed over to a psychiatrist for exami-

During the lengthy analysis the spotlight fastens on the doctor. He is another case. Wretched in his marriage, he begins to share his patient's fantasies and finds sic mythological roots in compulsive equine worship.

Shaffer's handling of this double exercise in Freudian investigation often borders on the ridiculous and its dramaturgy is extremely shaky. He is unequal to the writing of the lyrical passages, and when the boy, in a frenzy of ecstasy, mounts a charger and expresses his delight, the author leaves him with earthbound exclamations. Pahet's "Recrets of the Soul," made in collaboration with the Freudian Dr. Hans Sachs, demonstrated the application of psychoanalytical methods far more clearly and

The film is awkward in movement and its deadly solemnity is wearying. Richard Burton, with agonizing grimaces and depressing meditations, is the doctor in need of psychiatric aid and Peter Firth fails to recruit sympathy for the boy with a love-hate passion

The best performances are in support, with Colin Blakely as the puritanical father who frequents blue movies, Joan Plowright as the hysterical, plous mother and Harry Andrews as the indignant stable master.

In "The Betsy" (at the Mer-cury, the Publicis Saint Germain and the Studio Alpha in English) Walter Bernstein and William Bast have sought to pass what must be a very long novel by Harold Robbins through the scenario strainer. As it covers the history of several generations of a family engaged in automobile manufacture, relating their business and private affairs in con-siderable detail, the job has obviously been a difficult one. It is to the credit of Bernstein and Bast that one usually knows who is who.

The founder of the firm, now 86 and in a wheelchair, is anxious to put a new car on the market: the Betsy of the title. His grandson is opposed to the project as the company's major revenue is no longer derived from car sales. There is much bad blood between the relatives.

The wily grandfather engages a daredevil sports-car driver who designs his own vehicles to Betsy. This young man is favor-ed by the great-granddaughter and has also had time to enter into a liaison with her father's British mistress. He is a livewire, quickly learning the tricks of the trade (they are many and devious) and turning out the model antomobile in the face of all brands of nefarious intrigues.

"Norman . . . Is That You?" (at the Elysées Point Show and Le Dragon in English) presents family problems of a different nature. A black tailor of the hinterlands, his wife having run off with his brother, goes to Beverly Hills to commiserate with his son, who is established as a window decorator of fashionable shops. He discovers to his horror that his son is a homosexual and his adjustment to this situation constitutes the main theme of the comedy.

Based on a Broadway play which prospered in Paris a few seasons ago as "Pauvre France," the film is amusingly played by Redd Foxx as the astonished father, Pearl Bailey, who shows up in the latter half as the returned wife, Michael Warren as the gay son and Dennis Dugan as his boyfriend.

In any production of "Poppea" there are some fundamental decisions to be made, given the absence of instrumentation and other performance clues in the score. Paris opted for Raymond Leppard's realization of the music, with its mixture of old and modern instruments and an approach intended to appeal-like Gimther Rennert's staging-"to the contemporary sensibility." The Paris Opera also laid on a cast of imposing dimensions, one that would have suited a revival of some major Verdi work, but whose sheer vocal weight seemed to be overkill in this dramatic. hut delicate and supple music.

Jon Vickers, o tenor whose experience ranges from Handel to Britten, brought an almost patho-logical intensity to the role of Nero, imperiously dominating the stage but often adopting a viclently declamatory style that overpowered the music. ing 17th-century vocolism. Ita Maximovna's unit set, borrowed from the San Francisco Opera and adapted to the much larger Paris stage, consisted of a triple tier of arches in a semicircle that imposed a visual unity and permitted quick-although sometimes deafening-scenic changes.

Within this framework, Rennert, who is no stranger to the work, set forth a highly uneven staging that ranged from cloquent simplicity, such as the scene of Senera's farewell to his disciples and in the final love scene, to ham-handed comedy, which got completely out of hand in the drunken episcde of Nero and Lucano (Michel Senéchal) celebrating Seneca's obliging suicide. In any case, this scene would have gained in impact if it had not been separated by an intermission from the scene of Seneca's death.

Julius Rudel conducted flexibly, spaciously and with much attention to detail. As the trio of silegorical figures in the prologue, Valerie Masterson, Isabei Gar-cisanz and Danièle Perriers got off to a slow start but found their vocal bearings by the time they reappeared, respectively, as Drusilia, Pallade and Damigelia. Joceiyne Taillon was vocally ripe and expertly comic as Poppea's vicariously ambitious murse.

Ginger Rogers Sings Her Story

By Henry Pleasants

LONDON, March 21 (IHT),-Among performers the term "pro" is the ultimate encomium. more complimentary, even, than "genius," reflecting achievement rather than endowment.

Ginger Rogers, opening a twoweek stay at the Palladium last night, offered about as compelling an example as can well be imagined of all that "profes-sionalism" implies. She sang, she danced, she talked, she joked, she camped a bit and hammed a bit, of poise and pace and proportion. She shares with Peggy Lee the ability to make everything seem inevitable while leaving nothing to chance.

Her show is essentially an autoblographical trip down memory lane, following her career from the time she became Texas state Charleston champion through "Girl Crazy" on Broadway, the pictures with Fred Astaire and other pictures, including her Oscar-winning "Kitty Foyle," and back to the stage in "Hello Dolly" Much of it is engagingly told

"May" is "the grimly witty ac-count" of the decline of an excon who "knows the world is crooked and hehaves accordingly, Vincent Canby says. Played by Dustin Hoffman, "he defines the meaning of recidivism" in run-ins with his Los Angeles parole officer (M. Emmet Walsh) and in his return to life as a holdup man. The film is "beautifully acted" and "vividly staged." Ulu Gosbard, the director, and Alvin Sargent, Edward Bunker and Jeffrey Boam, who wrote the screenplay, compel us, says Canby, to become "fascinated by a rat, in spite of ourselves."

"The Fury," directed by Brian De Palma, is an attempt at an "international horror-spy-occult mind-blower of a movie," according to Vincent Canby. John Far-ris's screenplay, based on a published novel, is about an American superspy (Kirk Douglas) whose psychic son is abducted from an Israeli beach, apparently for the exclusive use of the U.S. government. For most of the film, he searches for his son, eventually ending up at a mysterious "institute" in Chicago where the psychically gifted are studied. There he finds, not his son, but a young woman (Amy Irving) who is in thought communication with the boy. It is the special effects and occasional action sequences, adds Carby, that make it, "in fits and starts, the kind of mindless fun that only a horror movie that so seriously pretends to be about the odd couple if there ever was one, writes Janet Maslin. Matthau is problem, Miss Maslin says, "but Matthau and Miss Jackson don't particularly set off fireworks together." She is a wry divorcee with romantic leanings, a consumer advocate who gets most of her information from Reader's Digest and perhaps the first movie heroine to make her living by baking since Mildred Pierce. He is a surgeon, an eligible widower. Director Howard Zieff "swivels around nervously among enough plot points for three and a half different movies," Miss Maslin says. "House Call' tries to seem stern and modern in establishing the divorcee's independence and her superiority to the bimbos the doctor regularly courts, but it turns too sentimental too soon," she writes. Among the many questions the film inadvertently raises, Miss Maslin says, is: "How come Matthau, after Miss Jackson steals his clothes and hides them in her freezer, manages to find in her closet a boa-trimmed bathrobe that fits him better than it fits ber?"

nee for the Oscar as the best foreign-language film of 1977, is beautifully directed by Moishe Mizrahi, the Egyptian-born Israeli director best known for his israeli films "I Love You, Rosa," and "The House on Chejouche Street." It makes profoundly moving the kind of emotions that the director has demonstrated in those films, Vincent Canby says "Madame Rosa" is sweat and tough in conventional ways, but it also acknowledges something you don't often see except in the films of directors like Renor and

"Madame Rosa," r'rance's nonti-

Such a character is Madame Rosa (Simone Signoret), a once-gaody whore who runs a kind of makeshift toarding house in her cramped apartment in Paris. As played by Miss Signoret, Rosa is 'a tremendous character, an overwhelming mountain of worn-out flesh whose arteries are hardening, whose ankles are weak and whose lungs are less dependable than a couple of ancient inner tubes," Cauby says.

"Stages," directed by Richard Foreman, tries to "fuse the theater of the abourd with the theater of the sentimental," Richard Eder says. It is about a dy-ing actor, recalling five crises of his life. In turn, he is a playwright who has just preduced a mediocre play, a blacklisted per-former fighting McCarthyism, a millionaire striving to presess his wife, a sick man in a canitarium and finally the proprietor of a haberdashery wrecked by de-mons. The sketches of this "lugubrious vaudeville," written by Stuart Ostrow, differ widely in style and quality, Eder says. Their only common link is Jack Warden's "quite brilliant" leading performance.

Warning Strikes Staged in Munich

BONN, March 21 (Reuters).-Labor strife in the West German metal industry spread today from the Stutgart area to Munich, where 15,000 automobile and arcraft workers staged warning strikes to demand an 8-percent pay increase, a union spokesman said.

Manufacturers in Baden-Wuerttemberg State yesterday locked out 230,000 metalworkers in retallation for selective strikes called by the union in Stuttgart and other places.

Today's warning strikes in Munich hit the BMW motor works and the Messerschmitt-Bc: kow-Blohm

Hoechst Sees Dividend Cut

Hoechst, reporting a drop in pre-tax 2577 in-come to 691 million dentache marks from 786 million DM a year earlier, says a lower dividend than the 8 DM paid in 1978 is unavoidable for 1977. However, it notes that tax credits under the recent West German tax reform should guarantee domestic shareholders a higher real pay-out. The chemical company says prices for many products remain under pressure, and especity like con-tances to be unsatisfactory. The parent company's position has not changed in the first months of this year from last year, officials say, sading that the fall of the dollar this year has intensified an already difficult situation on foreign markets. #### East-Bloc Western Loans Rise $5 Billion

GENEVA, March 21 (AP-DJ) The Soylet Union and other Bast European nations increased their borrowing in the West last year by $5 billion, bringing the Bast's total debt position to about $40 billion, the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) reported today. Largely by reducing imports, the Bast also cut its trade deficit with the West to shout $5 billion from $7.4 billion the previous year, the ECE sald in its annual report on the Eastern economies.

East-West trade volume dropped 3 per cent in the year, and given the singgish economic recovery in ion in 1978, the report added. Green debts with the West minus-, repayments and foreign currency reserves kept in Western Banks may have risen to be-tween $37 billion and $40 billion at the end of 1977 from $22-$25 hillion in 1978. By contrast total exports to the West last year totaled about $20 billion.

But the report noted that some of the debt was repayable in goods produced from projects financed in the West. The value of such "counterpart" deliveries based on current contracts is. About $12 billion.

ilon. The peak borrowing was $8.6 billion in 1975. The ECE said that this lower level of borrowing reflected the shrinking of currentaccount deficits, stepped-up gold sales and a lowering of assets held in Western banks. It said that, balancing assets against Habilities, the East's debts totaled $34.4 bil-lion at the end of last June, up from $21.3 billion at the and of 1976. About 33 per cent of this debt was accounted for by the Soviet Union, 24 per cent by Poland, and 14 per cent by East Germany. The REC said the Eastern coun-

The UN agency also said that East European imports may recover in 1978 because they will need to step up purchases of grain this year: Easter Economics Slowed product growth—the measure used for economic growth—fell to 3.5 per cent last year, below its 4.1-per-cent target and down from 5. per cent the previous year.

Poland's rate of growth at 5.5 per cent in 1977 was, as planned, lower than in 1976. Hungary largely exceeded its planned tar-get by expanding 8 per cent. Czechoslovakia's growth at 45 per cent was below pism, while East Germany was rather more succossful at 52 per cent. Romania did the best of all with an 8.6-percent growth rate, but this was well below its target of 11.3 per-cent and was below 10 per cent for the first time since 1970.

Bulgaria recorded a growth rate of 63 per cent and now has set its 1978 target at 6.8 per cent.

WASHINGTON, March 21 (Reuters).—New orders received by manufacturers of durable goods rose $1.53 billion, or 2.5 per cent, to a seasonally adjusted $63.79 bil-Ecn in Pebruary, the Commerce Department said today.

That compared with a revised drop of $3.91 billion, or 5.9 per cent, in January, which was originally reported as a 4.4-per-cent

Pehruary shipments rose $2.24 utilion, or 4 per cent, to $61.22 billion after a January decline of 45 per cent.

The backlog of unfilled orders rose $2.57 billion, or 1.4 per cent, to $191.17 billion after a 1.8-per cent rise in January. The department said durable goods orders have been volatile in recent months due to defense spending. The average changes over the last three months have up 1.7 per cent for shipments and up 2 per cent for unfilled

The department said new orders for transportation equipment, which rose ? per cent above Janpary, accounted for about twothirds of the latest increase.

New orders for non-defense capital goods, considered a key indicator of future plant and equipment spending, rose 2.3 per cent.

Diamonds Are Best Friend To Speculators, Hedgers

NEW YORK, March 21 (IHT).—Diamonds are becoming reasingly popular with investors, staying away from the bearish New York markets, and speculators, wanting to cash in on an up market before it turns down. As a result, the and the New York-based retail jewelry chain Tiffany Co. are now warning prospective customers that diamond prices are now warning prospective vustomers that diamond prices are unrealistically high.

Rough diamonds are commanding premiums as high as 40 per cent in such major cutting centers as Amsterdam, London, Antwerp, Belgium, Haifa, Israel, and New York

Industry sources said the speculation was being fed by soaring demand at a time when the dollar is weak and the New York stock market sluggish.

DeBeers, warning that it might impose surcharges on some of its transactions on top of its 17-per-cent increase announced in December, appears disturbed by the steep premiums offered by speculators on mout diamonds that it had sold to its regular trade customers.

"If speculative trading continues to produce substantial preciums in the cutting centers." DeBers said, "our central selling organization will be obligid to take action to insure that the producers for whom it acts receive the benefits of the Walter Hoving, chairman of Tiffany, has charged that the major European diamond cutters "are trying to corner the market, hoping to cash in on the lack of confidence in securities and are withholding supplies from the American wholesale and retail trade." In an advertisement in Friday'e New York Times, Tiffany asserted that "Diamonds are too high . . . some speculators have driven diamond prices too high. We suggest you look before you leap." However, Mr. Hoving denied that Tiffany was urging consumers not to buy diamonds now.

DeBeers maintains speculative trading has carried open market prices to levels which are not justified in relation to

"Stocks at inflated prices have accumulated in the cutting centers, It says, "and are largely financed by bank credit which is now at a level substantially higher than that needed to finance the normal working of the industry. The market should be alert to the dangers inherent in the situation.

Many companies also come to us for the rapid movement of funds across national borders, for foreign exchange transactions, for money market and investment information."

Sulimirski sums up the Irving's strength this way: "With outposts in key financial centers and with an experienced New York based staff that travels around the globe to attend to the needs of customers, we are well placed to assist your company, anywhere."

A major bank. At 36/38 Cornhill, in the heart of the financial district that Londoners call the City, stands the Irving's London branch office. This branch is a major commercial bank in its own right with current assets that now exceed $1.5 billion.

"Our mission in London," says General Manager James M. Stewart, is to serve the needs of corporate business, both resident and

For resident companies, a rypical ignment might be to explore a direct investment program in the U.S. Irving specialists in London. working with their counterparts at Irving headquarters in New York, provide counsel and assistance on such alternatives as acquisition, joint venture or establishing 8 de novo operation. For non-resident companies, assignments might include providing a comprehensive analysis of the company's overseas organization, sales volume, inventory policy and con-trol; reporting and budgeting net assets or liability position in foreign currencies; evaluating capital expenditure programs and sources of local financing.

Whatever the assignment, says Stewart, "our clients know that at the Irving they'll find the experience and the commitment to get the job done right."

A key financial

center. "We're in Frankfurt for a number of good reasons," says James W. Scanlan, the Irving's Director for Europe, resident in Frankfurt.

James W. Scanlan, Jr., Vice President.

"It is a major financial center in a country with a very stable economy and a strong currency. Many multinational corporations are represented here, including over 200 American ones. From Frankfurt we also have easy access to dients throughout Germany, as well as in Switzerland, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg and Austria.

"Ar our Frankfurt Branch," says Scanlan, "we offer a full range of commercial banking services. Among them is foreign exchange. Our dealing room maintains daily contact with international treasurers of major corporations in Germany. We keep them abreast of up to the minute developments, as well as longer term fundamentals."

Complementing this personalized service, Frankfurt Branch distributes to its customers the Irving's Foreign Exchange Market Trends, which is published by the Economic Research and Planning Division in New York and available in both English and German.

ABOUT MEN

By Phyllis Chesler, Simon & Schuster, Illustrated. 281 pp. $10.95.

Reviewed by John Leonard

DHYLLIS CHESLER, the author of "Women and Madness" and professor of psychology at the City University of New York, has written a brave. sad, disorderly, sometimes selfindulgent, often infuriating, always provocative book.

The disorderliness and the selfindulgence are its higgest problems. It lacks the coherence and control of, say, Susan Brown-miller's "Against Our Will." It fiails and keens. It seems somehow hasty, or slapped arbitrarily together, variously composed of grim reminiscences. literary snippets, newspaper clippings, interviews with men, art reproductions with critical captions and prose meditations tortured almost but not quite to the point of poetry. I'm reminded, unfortunately and inappro-priately of Norman Mailer when the vapors take him. Still s reviewer, especially a male reviewer, ought to attend to the broad outline of the argument. Many male reviewers of Miss Brownmiller's book, for example, indulged themselves by animadverting on her interpretation of the Emmett Till story, instead of consulting their own demons what other demons could we consult?-to ask if what she said was generally, admissibly, true. Had we consulted our demons I think we would have to admit that yes, the rapefantasy was among them, or alleast used to be. We might then have been in a position to reply that most of our fantasies involve doing violence to other men And that precisely is Dr. Chesler's basic argument. Sons long for the love and protection of their fathers, and usually don't get it. Fathers are off fighting with other men, at work and war. Sons will grow up punishing the women in their lives for what their fathers failed to give them, and for the frustrations of their own work. Complicating the scenario, according to Dr. Chesler, is "uterus-envy." She more or less sums up: "I see the terrifying battle between fathers and sons-which most sons have always lost-confirmed; I see how every day Eve is punished again for man's anguish over Paradise Lost—and for her childbearing abilities."

Elsewhere she says: 'Male emotions of rage, outrage, jeal-ousy, and shame—toward more powerful men-are laid to rest, or acted out, in women's beds, or in pornographic sexual fantasies. Pacifying sexual orgasms help men avoid the even greater excesses-of fratricide or patricide —that would otherwise surely occur in the 'dark Satenic mills' of male employment or on the male battlefields of war."

Aside from uterus-envy-which I am unai any more than I've ever been able to secure for my conscious mind an admission of that popular subconscious desire. Œdipus complex—I think Dr. Chesler is quite right, and her formulation helps explain much of the evidence she cites on how sad males feel after sex, how hard we find it to talk about our feelings (especially to other men), how much we seem to need some sort of hierarchical

On pornography, Dr. Chesler is superb. On male homosexuality, she is going to get herself into trouble with the cadres of various liberation movements (She suggests that it is "related to a desire to solve the psychopolitical war between fathers and sons" and "to defuse the escalation of male-male rivalry by eliminating women as a basis for competition," as well as being one way of resolving the Œdipal dilemma.) On the art she reproduces, she is invariably pertinen; in her comments, and just 43 invariably ideological and reductive. We do, though, get some sense of why Athena had to come out of Zeus's head instead of a lower region: why it was necessity to invent a Maconna, and why, according to Michelangelo, the creation was man-to-man, finger-to-finger. Nevertheless, much of this book is an impulsive mess. Considering the literature on fathers, sens, brothers and male friends, her snippets are skimpy. Why, among the myths and art, so much of the West and so little of the Orient, where the same problems presumably apply—especially since Dr. Chesler was once married to an Oriental. But then her accounts of the men in her life are also skimpy, brutal, finger-nail-parings. And how many men did she interview. under wha: pretext, from which socioeconomic backgrounds?

I can imagine half s dozen other possible reasons for Jewish circumcision besides menstruation-envy. One begins with hy-giene. No, women aren't always masochistic and men always sadistic. Nor for a momen: do I admit that men-she does not qualify a particle-men believe that women are not human beings." She provokes and despairs.

Listen: Much is made here of the mighty mythic penis, in art architecture and machinery, IDr. Chesler might also have mentioned such symbolic sets of male sex organs as the triangle of Pythagoras, the trinity of Christ and the triad of Hegelian dialectic.) Maybe, just maybe, the 20th century proposes some con-trary myths. Consider, besides the caves and the seas, the ambivalence of the helicopter, the explicitness of geodesic domes. the shopping mali, McDonald's golden arches, baseball stadiums, the cyclotron and "field" theory. and San Antonio have the championships of their respective divisions all but wrapped up, but otherwise the playoff picture in both conferences is muddled. Eleven other teams are fighting for the remaining eight playoff

delphia, Phoenix, Los Angeles and

In each conference, the six teams with the best records qualify. The division winners in each conference have first-round byes. The first-round pairings in each conference are the No. 3 team vs. No. 6 and No. 4 against No. 5. The winner of No. 3 vs. No. 6 plays No. 2 and the winner of No. 4 vs. No. 5 plays No. 1. As of yesterday, teams qualifying in the west (in order) would be Portland, Denver, Phoenix, Seattle, Los Angeles and Milwankee, in the East: Phila-delphia, San Antonio, Washing-ton, New York, Cleveland and

But in the West, Milwaukee is only slightly ahead of Chicago and Golden State for the sixth spot. And Phoenix, which once had the third-best record in the NBA, has shumped badly in the last three weeks and could be passed by both Seattle and Los Angeles for the No. 3 placement before the end of the season,

In the East, Washington and a tussle for the No. 3 position and the resulting matchup with No. 6 in the playoff series. Cleveland, which had been struggling, has an outside chance of catching both the Knicks and

But the Cavaliers also have to watch their flank. Atlanta, which ranks as the NBA's surprise club, Injuries could determine how well all of these eastern clubs do. Atlanta has been playing without its leading scorer, John Drew, (sprained ankle) while Cleveland has been without Walt Frazier (bad toe). New Orleans has done remarkably well despite the absence of Pete Maravich (bad knee), who might try to play this week, either Tuesday against New Jersey or Wednesday against Washington.

The Rangers were first understood to have offered Nilsson and Hedberg a total of $1.8 million for two years but it was learned that the team signed the players Saturday to a two-year package worth $2.4 million. Nilsson and Hedberg would thus receive $600,000 a year each for two

The Jets' new owners, headed by Michael Gabouty, announced their hopes to match the Rangers' offer on Feb. 25, when they bought the team. They had 44 days after that to come up with the money.

"As we approached the dead-line concerning the New York offer, we have not had sufficient assurance that we would gain entry into the NHL for the 1978-79 season," the Jets' owners said in a statement. "This dilemma makes it virtually impossible to compete with the New York of-

The loss of the two stars also was regarded as another blow to the World Hockey Association in its effort to survive against the entrenched National Hockey League. The signing may also serve to escalate salaries in the NHL, where players average $90,000 a year.

Goals and Assists Nilsson, 27, the WHA's secondleading scorer, is the league's top playmaker with 85 assists while Hedberg, also 27, leads the WHA in goals scored with 59. Karlier this season, Hedberg set a pro-

hockey record by scoring 50 goals

in less than 50 games. Hedberg and Nilsson have been playing for the Jets since they were signed as rookies four seasons ago. Hedberg is a right wing and Nilsson a center. Announcing the signing the Rangers general manager, John Ferguson, said, "The rap on them

John Merritt, the Tennessee State coach, thought that Gilliam would be able to handle the pressure not only of making it as a quarterback, but of making it as a black quarterback. Merritt remembered another Tennessee State quarterback, Eldridge Dickey, who was drafted by the Oakland Raiders in 1968, the only black quarterback ever selected in the first round, But the Raiders converted Dickey into a wide re-

Won a Starting Role

In his third year, Gilliam was so impressive in the exhibition games that Chuck Noll decided, "He deserves to start," Despite four victories, a loss and s wild tie in Denver, the Steeler coach changed quarterbacks. Per-haps if Gilliam had been on a team that wasn't shooting for the Super Bowl or that didn't have two other capable quartercks in Bradshaw and Terry Hanratty, he would have received a longer loo.

And later the following season, around the time that he later acknowledged he got on drugs, Gilliam did something so seriously wrong that Noll swore the Steelers not to discuss it with any outsiders.

In his first Saints training camp, he borrowed a teammate's car and disappeared. He returned, then disappeared again. He later was arrested in Nashville and put on probation by a judge who stipulated that he had to undergo treatment for heroin ad-

"Joe can still throw the football 60 yards through the goal posts," one of the Tennessee State players was saying. "He's still got the arm."

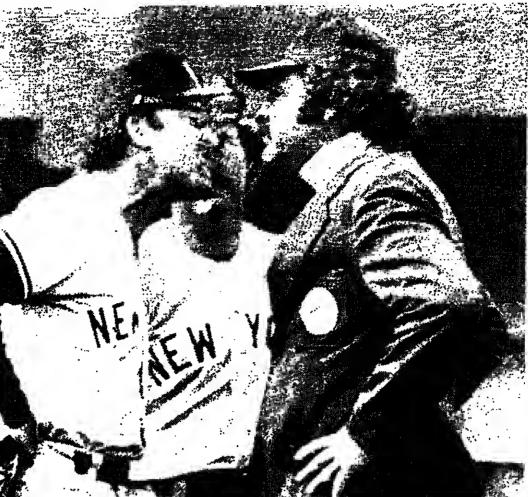

But he's still jammed up. He's facing a holdup charge for an alleged $44 robbery. Another ar-rest for an alleged $20 robbery of a Tennessee State waterboy was dropped. But he still comes around the campus that has been so much a part of his life to work with the quarterbacks and see what's happening.

YUMA, Ariz., March 21 (NYT), -When the Swallows come back to Yuma next year, they'll bring their own noodles again. These aren't the swallows who come back to Capistrano each year. These are the Yakult Swallows of the Japanese Central League, who nested here with the San Diego Padres for spring training.

They brought their own noodies and they prepared their own rice, making it mushler than Americans like it. Other than that, they thrived on American food, especially ham and eggs for

They also thrived on long workouts. They usually were on the field at Desert Stadium at 9 o'clock in the morning and they didn't depart until 4 in the afterooon, whereas the Padres per-spired from 10 to 2 until their exhibition games began last

In other mo-ments, some talked of Joe Pepitooe, ooce of the New York Yankees and briefly with the Swallows once upon a time.

"What do you remember," a little lefthanded pitcher named Takeshi Yasuda, a 17-game winner last year, was asked, "about Joe Pepitone.

When he heard the name, Yasuda smiled, and when the interpreter, Don Hito, a 20-year-old shortstop who had attended Cal Poly, translated the question, the lefthanded pitcher tapped his chest, then tapped his head.

"Great ballplayer but he had a different way of thinking," the interpreter said. "He was kind of a lazy guy. He only played 10 games. Once he forgot his spikes and there wasn't another pair big enough to fit him so he said he couldn't play, but the manager told him to buy a new

The curve-balling right-hander turned in his most impressive showing of the spring and un-doubtedly earned the club's open-ing-day pitching assignment yesterday with six impressive innings in the Dodgers' 14-1 victory over the Texas Rangers. John Lowen-stein singled home the Rangers' run off Sutton in the fifth inning.

Sutton has been the Dodgers' most consistent pitcher since 1971, a two-time 19-game winner, a onetime 20-game winner and never a loser in post-seasoo and ell-star competition.

To back him up, Reggie Smith and Dusty Baker each hit a threerun homer and Myron White and Rick Monday also homered to lead a 17-hit attack, the Dodgers' best output of the exhibition season. Paul Lindblad was the loser. In other games:

Argentine Terrorism, Just for the Sport of It

By Rob Hughes

LONDON, March 21 (IHT) .--What fale awaits the European scecer star in Argentina? The question of security, in its broadest sense, has exercised cur minis for months now. if not years, and does so increasingly as the June World Cup accelerates toward us. Tonight, however, West Gential players preparing to play a match in Buenes Aires will be trying to control nerves affected less by terrorist threat, more by the very real danger of direct physical harm on the field of play.

Borursia Mouncheng adbach plays Boca Juniura champions of South America, for the unoffic'al we: 'd club championship to-night. This is a home-and-away fixture usually played by the Eurepean Cup winners and the Copa Libertadores of America, and there with even short memories will realize that Boraccia are not the champions of Europe.

Liverpool Refused

Berussia volunteered to stand wheo Liverpool refused to play the Argentines. Why? Liverpool's memory of the world club championship is perhaps the longer; Borustia's need of the glory and the cetimated $40,000 proceeds from the Buenos Aires game the Liverpool's viewpoint was put succinctly by its manager, Bob Paisley: "I gave my directors a broad reason why we should not go to South America," he says. "There is a grave risk of injury from physical involvement."

Does the man exaggerate? Consider for yourself. In 1987. the Glasgow Celtic goalkeeper Ronnie Simpson was injured by a stone hurled at his head even before the play began and finally four players from Celtic and two from Racing Club of Buenos Aires were sent off.

The Coltic Players, admitting they rad been drawn to retaliating against brutelity, were each fined $250 by their club, while the Racing Chib men were rewarded with a new car.

Stitches for Charlton

That action must have stirred the mood of Estudiantes de La Plata who, in 1968, mixed it with Manchester United. Again the British were drawn. In the first game in Argenting, Nobby Stiles, Manchester's England defender, was sent off for disputing a throw-in, although he had been savagely head-butted earlier, and Bobby Charlton needed three stitches for a shin wound. In the return game in Manchester, George Best and Medina were sent off, for fighting.

One more year on, and in 1969 A.C. Milan had two players vi-clously assaulted, one having his nose broken by Guarez, the other being kicked in the back by gralkeeper Poletti as he lay on the ground, being treated. Although Suarez, Poletti and Madero were all thrown into jail by their country's president, the sentences were too light to allay European fears of the Argentine, particularly when, in 1972, Johan Cruyff, the Ajax and Netherlands star, was so harshly treated that he never has recovered totally from the crude ankle injury inflicted by National defenders. Ajax had learned its lesson, or had it? The previous year, Ajax had refused to play in South America and Panathinaikos, runners-up in Europe, stepped into the breach as Borussia now has. And so again, when they conquered Europe in 1973, Ajax refused to play and Juvenius deputized. Since then Bayern Munich has judiciously sidestepped two invitations to represent Europe agains) South America—when the op-conents were Argentinians—and in between hoppily agreed to play Cruzeiro c. Brazil. That was 1976, and Bayern won comfort-

New you have some idea of the recent history that proved daunting to Liverpool although not apparently to Bornsia. Ironically, these two teams have been drawn to meet in the semifinals of this year's Europeso Cup, the first leg of which is to be played in Duesseidtof on March 29.

Neither Borussia nor Liverpool is particularly hot in its league at the moment, bot, unless the South American experience rebounds on them, and if Borussia can mend the pulled muscle of its European player of the year Alan Simonsen, in time, I would have favored the Germans to win. The urge to avenge last summer's defeat in the Rome final should. after all, outweigh the desire of Liverpool to repeat its victory. Meanwhile, the rising anxiety for the welfare of Borussia's players, is, you can be sure, reaching all the way to the West German national trainer, Helmut Schoen. In Berti Vogts and Rainer Bonhof, Borussia has two certain World Cup players, and in Jupp Heynckes a possible third. How the World Cup nations, let alone Liverpool, would relish the absence of that trio! Having already declared a lean ing towards Borussia, the "un-derdogs" in one semifinal, let m: go the whole hog and tip Bruges of Belgium to nudge out Juventus of Italy in the other. OK. Bruges is nothing special in European terms, just a solid, dogmatic team of fighters, and OK, Juventus boasts seven full Italian internationals.

But that is precisely the point: The players of Bruges will treat their European semi as the ultimate, those of Juventus have the distraction of keeping sound in mind and limb for Argentina. Indeed, this next fortnight could easily see the outcome of the European Cup being settled in-directly by the phobias surround-

Middle-Class Revolt

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK.—Possibly the most political groupings that routinely important political current fight each other for power. flowing just now is the anger of the middle class. From New York to California, oews accounts speak of a middle class seething against a system it perceives as increasingly inindifferent if not hostile to middlec ass interests. What is curious in this is the absence of any clear idea of what the middle class is. The old oction that it was the white-collar and storekeeping branch of society.

Baker recegnizable through comfortable but not splashy income and faith in the status quo, is no longer useful. For one thing, blue-collar people are nowadays paid as we'l. sometimes hetter, than their more e'egantly dressed neighbors, and tend toward a conservatism that constantly refreshed George Wallace and Richard Nixon alike. For another, economic definitions of a middle case have become almost impossible because of the country's grotesque tax system and the great variations in living costs from area to area. In Maniattan people who earn $70,000 a year insist they are middle class, although people who feel middle class in Nebraska believe them to be rich as Croesus. Home ownership not so long ago was a useful definition of what it meant to be middle class. Yet now part of the middle class anger is directed against governmeot pressures to encourage black home ownership. The fact that blacks may enjoy exuberantly

The definition of what the middle class is not can be extended until we are led to conclude that it is the only politically influen-tial nonexistent force in American society. Economically, ra-cially, culturally and ideologically, the middle class does not exist. In fact, the spectrum of people who think of themselves as mid-

taxed income does not qualify them for acceptance in these

middle-class neighborhood pro-

What does exist is a state of mind, dangerous to politicians. When so many natural enemies fe: a communality of political identity the politician must walk with caution. The difficulty here Is to identify the common grievance that makes to many natural enem as come together under the mystic banner, "middle class."

Part of the explanation probably les in the fact that government is always a debate about how the rie will he cut. With wealth diminishing and more customers to be served, the pla is eliced thioner and thinner there days for a most everybody. while the price continues to rise. The result is a pervasive social exerperation arising from the discovery that a most everybody seems to he getting less for his

This doesn't explain why so much truculence should garb it-self as "middle class." One theory might be that "middle class" is an idea of such staid respectability in the United States that the term has always carried a heavy lead of values. Even as a term of derision, as it used to be hurked about by bohamians and advanced thinkers it implied conventional vaines associated with American respectability. Duliness. to be sure, but also respect for good form and convention, for manners and orthodox thought, for hard work. To be middle class was to be sound, the right what the present "middleclass" anger is moving us toward is something quite different. To California it threatens a bax revolt with the most radical consequences. In communities where its aims are to protect the ethnic status quo in schools and housing, it flirts openly with racism. It looks very much, in fact, like backlach." These and other speculative adventures implicit in the rise of "middle-class" anger seem re-mote from that stolidity for which "middle class" once stood. What we may have here is most mood, instinctively draping itself

The Growing Roster of Imposters in the U.S.

SAMUEL JOHNSON.

By Robert E. Dallos

NEW HAVEN. Conn.—Apparently a lot of people haven't gotten Johnson's nessage. They are among an everincreasing number who are fibbing about where or even if they went to college. If they are not lying outright, they are at least magnifying their academic achievements. They do it to get jobs, to boost their eges, to borrow money, to sell magazine subscriptions, to win political posts, to lure prospective investors into business ventures, to gain entrance into graduate schools and to impress prospective fathers-

The more prestigious the school, the bigger its roster of phony graduates. And companies that once accepted everything on a resume without question are becoming more suspicious and more alert.

"If people never went to college and if they pick a school out of the air, they are certainly more likely to pick a more famous institutioo-one which comes to mind easier or one that will be more beneficial in getting a job," Wealey Poling. Yale University's director of alumni records, said. 'If they are graduates of colleges with lesser reputations, they'll also dance at prestige schools.

Yala's files of persons who have come to its attention for claiming to be alumni when they are out number more than 7,000. Of the requests that come into Stanford University for substantiation of graduation, an average of one a day doesn't check out. Schools find that many names come up over and over again.

Little to Be Done

There is little the schools can do to stop it. Such false claims constitute misdemeanors in several states, including California and New York. But it is difficult to prosecute even if an offender can be apprehended.

Last year a man from Alexandria, Va., pleaded guilty in a federal court in Bal-limore to making an illegal attempt to obtain a high government job with the Federal Trade Commission. He had lied when he said he had a doctorate in computer sciences and three master's degrees. The Harvard Business School says that it writes to those it catches making phony claims. A typical letter: "A person claiming a degree using your name has been trandulently representing himself. We

"No man ever yet became great by really don't like this. We are going to have to do something about it." Stanford goes further and threatens legal action, but so far it has not taken

> Lr. Donald Hammersley, deputy director of the American Psychiatric Association, believes that such dishonesty takes place because society puts value on attendance at prestige schools.

"Apparently it is so important to some people that it almost seems true to them that they did go there because they wished so badly that they had." Dr. Hammersley said. "If a person has that kind of personality characteristic allowing him to tell lies and if he thinks he'll not get caught, why then he'll lie about this."

Aithough some persons lie only on resumes for job or loan applications, others go to greater lengths.

Matthew Stephens, director of the undergraduate division of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, recalls that an official-looking transcript was sent back to Wharton hy a suspicious personnel officer at Ford Motor Co. The transcript had Mr. Stephens's authentic signature stamp and the imposter had followed the correct grading system, had listed existing courses and given himself average grades.

"It looked like an absolutely authentic lramccript," George Parks, associate direc-tor of Wharton's Graduate Division, said. We really hegan to wonder if we had made some kind of mistake. But we just couldn't find this fellow anywhere in our records. Then we discovered one mistake. ile had stamped the date of graduation cest to the signature and the date was off hy one day."

Wharton has not been able to determine how the phony signature was acquired or how the imposter got an official transcript

The Harvard Business School prints a formal resumé book each year that contains the curriculum vitae of all graduates who want to be included. It distributes the book to 300 to 400 corporations looking for employees.

Harvard had his resumé and picture in the book. As if that were not enough, he got his nicture in the Harvard yearbook that year.

Since then, Harvard has tightened its procedure. It requires producers of the resume book to check the names against the official graduating roster.

Prominent persons sometimes lie a little about their education in biographies they supply to Marquis Who's Who, Inc. When the publishing firm discovers an exaggeration, the subject is asked to supply proof. If he cannot, his sketch is pulled from the next year's edition of the proper

"Schools and education," Ken Petchenik, president of Marquis, said, "that seems to be the one category of information that people who are going to lie about do lie about. The ironic thing is that these are all successful people. I cannot think of a single instance where the person lied shout the reason that gained him entry into 'Who's Who' in the first place.

One educator maintains that by the time a person rises to the prominence necessary to qualify for listing in one of the Who's Who volumes, he is trapped by

More often than not, the lies on a job resume come out after a person has been hired because employers often initiate verification checks after the employment process is completed.

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, Inc., the brokerage firm, said that New York Stock Exchange regulations require it to check out backgrounds of all applicants. The 1 per cent who lie are

Although the number of imposters is on the rise, the practice is by no means new. Yale's files of imposters date back to about 1900. There are trate letters from hotel keepers who charged that persons claiming to be Yale alumni skipped a hill or cashed a bad check. In those days, a Yale degree was equal to today's American Express card in securing credit.

Checking Roots

Many of the entries in the Yale roster of imposters are the result of requests by persons checking their roots. And there are many recorded disappointments when a great-great-grandson finds out that his great-great-grandfather did not get his degree from Yale, no matter what the family stories had held.

There are fathers who find out that their daughters are not marrying a pedicreed Yale or Princeton graduate. Quite a number of prospective fathers-in-law check out their daughters' flancés, educators say.

Even the federal government is getting into the act. When the Justice Department created a new identity for a man convicted of mail fraud who had become a government witness, he was installed in several high-ranking jobs in city departments. On his application for city manager of one community, it was stated that was a Wharton graduate. He wasn't. @ Los Angeles Times.
